THE ARRIVAL OF THE RADON 29'

As some of you may already be aware, in recent months D.R. Radon Boat Building has developed a new model: The Radon 29' ! This week will mark the completion of the mold and the beginning of production on the first Radon 29' . The new design has generated enthusiasm both here at Radon Boats and in the boating community. Despite the fact that the mold is only on the cusp of completion, three orders have already been placed for the Radon 29'. Although similar in design to the classic Radon 26', the spacious 29' will provide increased deck space, cabin size, and more available storage space. As Don explains, more space isn't the only improvement in the new design, "One of the benefits of the 29' is that it will provide boaters with the ability to brave rough waters at faster speeds." Here's what some of the guys in the yard are saying about the exciting new project:

Rene Melgoza, Shop Foreman: "I'm looking forward to riding on the new boat...going out fishin'."

Rob Griffin, Woodworking Specialist: "It'll be nice to see more options for the customers...Now they'll have more choices about things like the size of engine box."

Ridin' High! Two Radon boats burn through ocean waters, separated only by thirty years. A longtime Radon customer just took delivery of this brand new custom 33', pictured left. On the right is the first Radon ever built for sale, in 1969, with two abalone divers at the helm.

FISHING TIP OF THE MONTH

For an awesome rig, John Ziegler (long-time sport fisherman and Radon Boat owner since 1986,) recommends sliding a torpedo sinker on your line and then tying it to a swivel. (The swivel acts as a stop for the sinker and prevents the line from twisting and kinking.) Take a two foot long leader and tie it to the other side of the swivel. John also recommends tying a big circle hook on the other end of the leader. He notes that you can vary the size of the rig to correspond with the species you are pursuing. John proclaims, "I've caught everything with my rig!"

SHOP SECRETS

Having trouble keeping your windows dry while you're cruising the high seas? If you want to optimize visibility and keep water off your windows, apply a coat of Rain-X to the outside of your windows before embarking. Water on the windows beads up and flies off, making windshield wipers almost completely unnecessary. Rain-X is great for keeping your windows clear and dry.
